Rays Principal Owner Stuart Sternberg announced on Thursday that the Tampa Bay Devil Rays will once again provide free parking for the 2007 season.

One year ago, upon assuming control of the organization, Mr. Sternberg eliminated the $10.00 per vehicle parking fee on team-controlled parking lots at Tropicana Field for all home games during the 2006 season. Today, he extended free parking for a second and final season.

"For one more season, we are foregoing parking revenue. This is an investment in our future. Free parking enhances the accessibility of our home games. It compels fans to come visit Tropicana Field, where they will have a fantastic experience," Sternberg said.

"I am very encouraged by the region's response to all of our initiatives. It has only solidified my confidence in our collective ability to build and sustain a franchise of which we can all be proud."
